

STEEL'S ONLY HOPE FAIR PLAY, SAYS GARY

Maintains This Policy in Corporation Despite Some Opposition.

FRONTS ON PRICE CUTS

Chairman of the Board Under Four Hours Cross-Examination at Hearing.

After being in the witness chair for almost four hours yesterday, under cross-examination concerning the methods, policies and conduct of the United States Steel Corporation, Elbert H. Gary leaned forward, and, interlocking his hands in an embarrassed sort of way, said to Jacob M. Dickinson, special counsel to the Government:

"I remember making a statement to the executive committee early in the history of the corporation that if this corporation was to survive, it must be on the basis of so conducting itself that no one should have any good reason to complain of its management. That was my disposition and effort, and I was sustained at the time by a member of the executive committee and by the finance committee and eventually by every one. By that I do not take credit to myself for originating the idea of insisting upon it."

Throughout the morning and the afternoon Mr. Gary had been quizzed concerning the conduct of the subsidiaries of the corporation which in the early days had shown a tendency to cut prices. Statements were produced by Judge Dickinson from records of the subsidiaries to show that the only way to run the steel business was to drive certain men out of it. Judge Gary admitted he had concurred in such opinions and had succeeded finally in changing the attitude of many of those men.

Some Aimed to Make Money Only.

In that connection the names of D. G. Reid, Charles M. Schwab, William Elders, L. C. Converse and William Ellis Corey were mentioned. Judge Gary, before mentioning any names, said that at that several of the men in the corporation had aimed to make all the money they could even by taking advantage of the misfortunes of others. He said that idea never appealed to him, though such methods were believed by many to be good business. He said he endeavored to check it.

"It has been said," he continued, as he straightened up in his chair, "that there was some disagreement between officials of the corporation and myself. That grew out of the fact that Mr. Schwab and Mr. Corey had been brought up in the steel business under different circumstances and had notions that were not in accordance with the idea of those who controlled the Steel Corporation. I say this without intending to say anything personal about those men."

Judge Gary said he began away back in 1904 taking "very strong" to eradicate everything I believed to be wrong." He pointed out that he fought for the fair treatment of competitors and for conditions in the iron and steel industry that would foster growth of trade for all the corporation's rivals. He spoke in an embarrassed manner and admitted he did not wish to criticize anybody, but he wanted to give the facts.

Men Who Stood by Him.

He said that Percival Roberts, Jr., was one of the men who stood by him, and he said that Robert Bacon, then a member of J. P. Morgan & Co., and Charles Steele, another member of the Morgan firm, stood by him.

"Mr. Schwab," said Judge Gary, "is clearly convinced today of the necessity for doing all that I claim was the intention of the Steel Corporation concerning proper and decent treatment."

Judge Gary showed by his testimony how he had sought to stop price cutting and how he made efforts to prevent subsidiaries from waging war on other steel concerns. When Judge Dickinson referred to Judge Gary's policies as "business competition," Mr. Gary became grave and said that while he did not pose as a "philanthropist in business," he had checked many methods of which he did not approve.

Judge Gary admitted that in the first three or four years of the corporation the policies of selling were not so carefully enforced as afterward. He admitted that he found great difficulty in harmonizing the views of the officers of the subsidiary companies and that officers of subsidiary companies had suggested driving competitors out of business.

Asked if the Steel Corporation could have put certain rivals out of business Judge Gary replied:

"I think we could at the start, and many others could have done the same thing."

There will be no hearing to-day.

POISON TRACE IN BABY'S BODY.

Doctors Also Find Needles and Pills Seen Former Maid.

An autopsy was performed yesterday upon the body of Anna, the eleven-month-old daughter of Herman Sorenson, a real estate operator living at 615 Sheridan avenue, Woodhull, L. I. The baby's parents told the authorities that Anna probably had been poisoned while lying unattended in her crib on Sunday afternoon and that a maid recently discharged had one day threatened to stab another of the Sorenson children and had left the house making threats against the family.

Dr. Francis Hart, a physician for Corner Schaefer of Queens and Dr. West of Brooklyn, a specialist in poisons, found that the baby's lips, tongue and throat had been burned as though by acid. In the baby's body were two needles, one in the left wall of the stomach and the other in the liver. The doctors say they entered the body at least four days ago. Detectives Charles Krummel and Albert Granger of the Ozone Park station of Queens, who are looking for the maid have little to go on. She was with the family so short a time that they did not learn even her last name.

COFFIN'S WIDOW LOSES ESTATE TO HIS COUSIN

Surrogate Ketchum of Brooklyn admitted to probate yesterday the will of George C. Coffin, a wealthy Manhattan lawyer who died suddenly in a barber shop on March 5 last, and took occasion to score not only the testator himself and the beneficiary, Mrs. Belle Coffin, Provoct of 95 St. James Place, but the peculiar conditions which now embarrass Surrogates and sometimes constrain their better judgment. This condition he described as "an intellectual scandal, the butt of the layman and the shame of the profession."

The probate was contested by Mrs. Grace E. Coffin of 43 West Eighty-second Street, who alleged undue influence in the making of a will that left an estate said to be worth more than $500,000 to Mrs. Provoct. Coffin carried a letter warning persons not to notify his family in the event of his sudden death.

At the trial Mrs. Provoct was severely cross-questioned regarding her relations with Coffin, who had lived in her home and transferred property to her in the ten years following the desertion of the contestant, his wife. She testified that they were distant cousins and denied that their relations had been improper.

ABANDONED HER TO THUNDER.

Mrs. Gallinger Asks Separation for This Honeymoon Cruelty.

Is a wife who is afraid of thunder entitled to a separation from her husband because he compelled her to remain in a dark room alone during a thunder shower, and on their honeymoon at that? This question is presented in the Supreme Court in a suit filed yesterday by Mrs. Blanche Gallinger against Edward Gallinger, a lawyer.

Mrs. Gallinger says it was at Emerson, L. I., that her husband refused her protection during a thunder shower, although he knew she was "temporarily" afraid of it, and because she went to her mother's rooms for protection during the storm he shut her out of their rooms.

She also alleges he keeps saying: "Oh, why did God curse me by giving me you for a wife?" and "Why did I ever marry you?"
